

1429. Pinidiyapathirage, M.J

Assessment of quality of care provided at antenatal feild clinics in the Gampaha District.

MSc. (Community Medicine) - 2003

D 1076

A large presentage of pregnant females did not receive information on some routine procedures carried out at antenatal clinics such as blood pressure monitoring (68.7) weight gain in pregnancy (50.2.) and on the vaccine given or its side effects (55.3) therefore it is recommended that health personal be more aware of the right of woman to have access to information and to participate in decicions affecting their health. Antenatal record keeping was cinsiderd satisfactory. It is recommended that supervision of clinics and maintainence of proper supervision notes should be strengthened in order to overcome trivial problems and improve the quality of services renderd at field antenatal clinics