Acknowledgements

Prof. Sirimal Abeyratne being my supervisor since the early period of my research has patiently guided me in managing all difficulties that I faced in my research work. Accepting to be my supervisor again in 2009 he has guided me and played a twin role as a mentor and a supervisor. I also would like to thank Prof. Chandra Rodrigo, Prof. Laksman Dissanayake, Prof. S. M. P. Senanayake, Prof. Danney Atapattu, Prof. P. Wilson, Prof. W. D. Lakshman, Prof. J. Uyangoda, and Prof. Amala de Silva for their guidance during the early stages of this study.

Dr. R. H. S. Samaratunga being my 2nd supervisor appointed in 2008, guided me to clarify the blurred areas of the issues of the research that helped me to follow the most appropriate path of study. His patient reading and editing of the final draft of the thesis helped to improve its standard. The guidance of Prof. Sirimal Abeyratne and Dr. R. H. S. Samaratunga had been very useful to me in the circumstances where there has been a dearth of experienced academics in the field of defence economics. The contributions made by the Dean of the Faculty of Graduate Studies, Prof. Sunil Chandrasiri and the boards of panels led by Dr. Kumudu Kusum Kumara, Prof. Amala de Silva Mr. Sarath Vidanagama and others also helped me in improving the research outcomes of the study.

I am grateful to the officials in the Department of Census and Statistics, General Treasury and the Ministry of Defence in sorting out the difficulties of data collection and data confusions in the area of defence. In this regard, my special thanks go to Mr. Sumanapala Pathirana of the Department of National Planning, Ministry of Finance. Also, I would like to place on record my gratitude to the Grama Niladharies of the villages in the sample survey and Mr. Sajith Dassanayake, Mr. M. M. Gunawardena and Mr. M. M. Gunasekara who helped me in conducting the survey in the villages of Egodagama, Hangawatte and Maragoda in the districts of Badulla, Kurunegala and Matara respectively. I also extend my gratitude to the members of the defence and non-defence families in those villages who cooperated in providing information/data without any hesitation. The guidance on the statistical analyses by Mr. Rushan Abeygunawardena of the Department of Statistics of the University of Colombo, Dr. Sarath Peiris, Senior Lecturer in Statistics of the Department of Mathematics, University of Moratuwa and Dr. Priyanga Dunusinghe of the Department of Economics has immensely helped me in improving the presentation of research outcomes of the study.
